Kyle Bell

"I wish I could feel the joy of gaming again."

Kyle was an ordinary high-school student who liked PC games a lot. After an accident, he has been left entirely blind - no longer able to enjoy the PC games he used to play. Even though there are games for the blind, he always needs to ask someone to help with the setup of the game. This is frustrating, especially since his relatives aren't technically skilled. Because of this, he ended up losing his excitement and not playing the games at all. He would like to feel at least a little more independent when it comes to PC games for the blind.

Name Kyle Bell
Age 17
Role High-school student
Accessibility Blind

Motivations

- To connect socially through gaming
- To feel independent and capable with technology
- To feel the excitement he used to have while playing PC games

Goals

- Quickly set up and play games from his PC without external help
- Feel more satisfied with the games for the blind

Pain points

- Complex game menus not optimized for screen readers
- Difficulty starting devices
- Constant reliance on family for setup
- Lost his hobby
- Misses the excitement of gaming

Behaviours

ThoughtWorks®